My foster son, Johnny, is having trouble at school. The teacher reports that he is not taking part in class discussions. When I ask if she has noticed if he is paying attention, she tells me that he appears to be listening to her lectures and her questions. I asked if this lack of participation has always been the case or if it is something new. She said that at the beginning of the school year, he raised his hand and answered several questions during science and math classes, but his answers were incorrect. She told him he was wrong and then called on other students. What could be causing Johnny's lack of participation? What can we do to help him?
