Parent 2

My foster daughter, Sarah, has been with us for 6-months. She endured some pretty harsh neglect while with her biological mother. They had very little money, and Sarah was malnourished when she came to live with us. Recently, when cleaning her room, I found food hidden in the corner of her dresser drawer; under her bed; and behind one of her dolls. We're worried about her eating food that may have spoiled. What could be causing this behavior, and what can we do to change it?
